

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This publication is the result of a two-year research project undertaken by Gun Free South Africa (GFSA) in partnership with the Centre for Conflict Resolution (CCR). GFSA and CCR are grateful to the International Development Research Centre (IDRC) and Oxfam, who were the main funders of this project, as well as to the Small Arms Survey (SAS), which provided additional financial support.

GFSA and CCR would like to thank the Arms Management Programme (AMP) at the Institute for Security Studies (ISS), which provided financial and technical assistance with respect to research, workshops and the publication of this monograph. Hence GFSA and CCR would like to acknowledge the governments of Finland, Germany, the Netherlands, Norway, Sweden and Switzerland who are the main funders of AMP.

The editors and researchers would like to thank the following individuals:

Sarah Meek and Noel Stott of ISS, who provided invaluable assistance throughout this project, and in particular gave generously of their time to comment on draft chapters.

Peter Batchelor and Nicolas Florquin of SAS for their advice, technical support and comments on draft chapters.

Fiona Grant of CCR who assisted with the financial management of this project.

Mark Chingono of CCR who undertook a peer review of a draft version this monograph, and provided the editors and researchers with useful comments.
