

ABOUT THE AUTHORS

Zachary Lomo is currently director of the Refugee Law Project. A graduate of Makerere University (LL.B, 1997) and Harvard Law School (LL.M, 2000), Zachary spent three years carrying out socio-legal research on the extent to which refugees enjoy their socio-legal rights in Uganda. This research led, among other things, to the foundation of the Refugee Law Project.

Lucy Hovil is the senior researcher at the Refugee Law Project and oversees the project's Working Paper series and advocacy work. She previously completed her doctoral studies at the London School of Oriental and African Studies, in which she conducted an analysis of the relationship between violence and identity in KwaZulu/Natal, South Africa, between 1990 and 1994.

The authors would like to thank Emmanuel Bagenda, Prisca Kimungi and Sasha Lezhnev for their invaluable contribution in both the field research and the report-writing process. They are also grateful to Winnifred Agabo for additional assistance during the field research process.
